CIGIE Releases First-Ever Report on the Top Management and Performance Challenges Facing Multiple Federal Agencies

Today, the Council of the Inspectors General on Integrity and Efficiency (CIGIE) released its first-ever report of the top management and performance challenges facing multiple federal agencies. For nearly 20 years, individual Inspectors General have created management challenges reports identifying the most critical, systemic problems facing the agencies they oversee. Today's report marks the first time that the Inspectors General, through CIGIE, have examined these reports from across the federal government to identify and analyze challenges that are common to their agencies.

The report identifies the 7 challenges that were the most frequently reported in management challenges reports created by individual federal Offices of Inspector General in 2017. Those 7 challenges are:

- Information Technology Security and Management
- Performance Management and Accountability
- Human Capital Management
- Financial Management
- Procurement Management
- Facilities Maintenance
- Grant Management

Today's report is part of CIGIE's ongoing effort to foster improvements in the federal government by assisting federal managers and policymakers in addressing the challenges that face the federal government, and by making the work of the Inspectors General more accessible to the public.

CIGIE's report, which includes links to the 61 publicly available management challenges reports issued by federal Inspectors General in 2017, may be accessed on Oversight.gov, where the public can also search a database of more than 8,800 publicly-issued reports from federal Inspectors General.
